Emergency Operations at Kyrenia

1. Attention is invited to the possibility that Mediterranean Bureau may suddenly be forced to discontinue its operations in Egypt. In such case emergency coverage of the best quality possible under the circumstances would have to be initiated immediately at Kyrenia.

2. Technical materials sufficient for emergency monitoring, including power generators, antenna kits and poles, receivers, recorders and the Butler building, are contained in the cargo which left port last week. Makeshift antennae would be adequate pending construction of the planned antenna farm. Tents could be used during the erection of the Butler Building. Copy could be hand-carried to [Redacted] Chief obstacle to emergency monitoring appears to be lack of personnel, particularly linguists.

3. Request this office be furnished from [Redacted] outline plans for emergency operation including estimate of local personnel immediately available; and that Kyrenia and this office be furnished recommendations from Cairo including estimate of personnel able to obtain immediate exit from Egypt in the event that Cairo operations must be discontinued.

This document part of classified
